

TOS students get selected for a two week training program at Infosys, Pune

Spark Catch Them Young (CTY) is a decade-long Infosys initiative, which has been training Government and Private high school students in the basics of Information Technology. Started in 1997, this two week long program aims to expose bright urban youth to the world of Information Technology by conducting a summer vacation program for them at Infosys campuses. It also raises the curiosity levels in young students to develop an interest in computer science and information technology.

The intended participants for CTY training are high performing students who have completed 8th standard from local Government and Private high schools and are interested in computer programming.

In this regard, a Selection Test was conducted by Infosys in TOS campus on 21st January 2017.
